This Chicken Has Teeth, But Perfectly Harmless

Mary Jane Is Its Name, and It Was Bred Old Kentucky-It Chews Its Corn, But Is Unable to Talk.

This atory is about a real hen with real teeth and it isn't a fake. The hen is named Mary Jane and is the prosectry of Mr. Henry Jamison, 1719 Pike Street, Covington, Ky., who sent his chicken here to be exhibited at the poultry and pigeon shows at Takeoma Park. The good hen arrived too liste, however, to take part in the contests, so she was just held at the show for a short time yesterday afternoon. She is now on her way to her kentincky home.

Mary Jane has only one row of teeth said that in on her under law. On the home of her sipper jaw there is a row of little subs which remind one of teeth, but on the bottom jaw they are well defined and she heast hem to chew with. Her master takes great palms in keeping the teeth in good condition. He believes that his only and the above the real and she uses them to chew with her when the state of the contest in the chickens hatched from her eggs are takes great palms in keeping the teeth in good condition. He believes that his conditions whe has been chewing her food all the life.

Mary Jane was the center of attraction at the above all yesterday aftersoons. She was fed corn which his open soaked in the chicken and better proportioned stock than the ordinary chick. The hen is two years old and is of Piymouth Rock stock. A. R. Lee, of the year field of the contest of articular, has been greatly interested in the chicken and will be possible to a stronger and better proportioned stock than the ordinary chick. The hen is two years old and is of Piymouth Rock stock. A. R. Lee, of the Piymouth Rock stock. A. R. Le
